

Colorado Artists in Recovery Presents:

Speaking the Language of Music & Recovery.

With Wil Snyder

Wil has developed his own curriculum over the years, "Speaking the Language of Music," which focuses on learning music like a language. This class not only brings recovery into the music mix, it hones in on it. Learning how to recover and learning music are related in every aspect. These paths greatly benefit from each other and Wil is here to help you learn to navigate them. We offer a new way to explore and navigate the universal language, to make it enjoyable, fun and a lifelong journey! We will deepen your understanding of music, your recovery and yourselves, while writing some great music. When you started learning English, did you read or write first? So why do people teach music backwards, and why do so many people quit? It's because they learned it from someone who wasn't hip to this method and this organization. Curious? Come learn more and sign up now! Beginners to Experts will benefit from taking this class and will have a final performance, which Wil will help you with!

A FREE music workshop for the recovery community
Starting September 13th (Every Monday night for 6 weeks)
In Person workshop at 3050 Richard Allen Ct., Denver, CO

For more information or to register, go to coloradoartistsinrecovery.org

Wil Snyder is a full time Pianist & multi-instrumentalist in the Denver area. He has been Sober for 5 years and is an active member in the Denver recovery communities. Wil plays in a multitude of bands & writes for many different artists and genres. Above all else, he wants to combine his skills and to be of service to his communities by passing along what he has learned.

